The unique position and place of each nation in the world community does not depend on the number of its population. Rather, the ability to manifest national characteristics, the knowledge of the representatives of the nation of their homeland, history, material and spiritual monuments and their ability to show them to the world determine their status in the international arena.

We all know that from the first days of our country's independence, terms such as "values", "national idea", "self-awareness", "national revival", "social justice", "national consciousness", "national pride", "national pride", "Patriotism" have appeared in all aspects of our life. These terms have been encouraging our people to act in unity and solidarity towards one goal: "A free and prosperous homeland, a free and prosperous life". After all, independence also means the awareness of national identity. In our country, a person and his life are considered the highest value. Since the emergence of humanity, his dignity, honor, and noble views have been glorified. Therefore, respecting the dignity and worth of a person, developing his living conditions, knowledge, and cultural and educational level, improving his health, and protecting his life are among the priority areas of our state policy, and this is also stated in our main dictionary: "The state expresses the will of the people and serves their interests." This is precisely the essence of the changes, reforms, and laws and regulations being adopted in our country today. Our national values are also closely related to universal values. Universal values are deep and comprehensive in scope and content, embodying the aspirations of all nations, peoples, and peoples. The more national values are combined with universal human values, the greater the opportunity for their development and popularization.

Today, it is necessary to identify pedagogical opportunities for the formation of a sense of national pride in future preschool educators and conduct scientific research in this area. Indeed, only if a preschool educator has a sense of national pride, then he will be able to correctly and systematically form a sense of national pride in preschoolers.

The "Explanatory Dictionary of the Uzbek Language" explains that "Iftikhar - Arabic means pride, boasting. It is also used in two meanings: 1. A feeling of glory, pride. 2. A work, person or thing that brings glory, is worth being proud of." In this analysis, we focused on the meaning of the words national pride, iftikhar, and fakhr. After all, we use all three words as synonyms in our language. Sometimes we use these words one after the other on one page. In fact, national pride is a concept specific to the nation, a sign of the existence of each nation in the world, a national expression.

In his book "Lessons of Morality," Ulfat Mahkamov describes the upbringing of "National Pride" as follows: "Pride is a great force that embodies the power of the people, their dreams and aspirations. National pride is distinguished by the greatness, vitality, and righteousness of the people, the people and the homeland. National pride shows the people as a people, the nation as a nation.”

Professor Komiljon Yusupov expressed the following opinion about national pride: “Today, we realize that our national pride and honor are not only raw materials, let's say cotton. Our language, our classical culture, our science that left Columbus in a state of disrepute, our generous land, our paradise-like country inspire in our hearts an endless sense of pride and honor. The feeling of national pride is a powerful defender of our independence.”

So, national pride is a manifestation of respect and reverence for one's people, one's homeland. This feeling gives a person unique pleasure and excitement. Each nation, while honoring and appreciating its traditions, language, material and spiritual culture, is always proud of it.

We all know that from the first days of our country's independence, terms such as "values", "national idea", "self-awareness", "national revival", "social justice", "national consciousness", "national pride", "national pride", "Patriotism" have appeared in all aspects of our life. After all, independence also means the realization of national identity. In our country, a person and his life are considered the highest value. Humanity has appeared, and its dignity, honor, and noble views have been glorified. Therefore, respecting the honor and dignity of a person, developing their living conditions, knowledge and cultural and educational level, improving their health, and protecting their lives are among the priority areas of our state policy, as stipulated in our main constitution: “The state should express the will of the people and serve their interests.” This is precisely the essence of the changes, reforms, and laws and regulations currently taking place in our country.
